The epidemiology of psoriasis in the low prevalence countries of the world. Psoriasis is a common, chronic, recurrent, inflammatory skin disease. To determine the global epidemiology of psoriasis in the low-prevalence countries of the world. Reports of psoriasis patients residing in the low-prevalence countries of the world from 1964 to 1999 were extracted from a series of reviews and conference proceedings, specifically from the 7th International Psoriasis Conference in 2003 and the 7th International Psoriasis Workshop in 2005. Data were extracted from the reports regarding the prevalence and prevalence/incidence of psoriasis in each country, demographic characteristics of the psoriatic population, factors which influenced psoriasis, and reported medical and psychosocial outcomes. In addition, literature reviews were performed to verify information from the reports. Sub-Saharan Africa, Latin America, and the Caribbean all had psoriasis prevalences of less than 1%. The prevalence of psoriasis in other low-prevalence countries ranged from 0.1% in North Africa and the Middle East to 0.7% in Japan and 0.8% in the United States of America. The 6a5afdab4c
