The Macro enables the user to transfer a table from a FoxPro source file to a Microsoft Access database. The macro allows inputting a table name, indicating the source location and the destination location, as well as the destination name. The macro is only capable of working with Microsoft Access databases, while it is not capable of reading and writing in FoxPro.Q: How do I include an external CSS file in a _Layout.cshtml file? I'm trying to use the eCSS extension (in my MVC project, and the documentation states I should place the CSS files into a _Layout.cshtml file, but I'm not sure how I should include it. Should I place it like this: @ViewBag.Title @Styles.Render("~/CSS/file.css") If so, should the path to the file be ~/CSS/file.css? Or is there another way to accomplish this? A: As said in the link you posted, it's just a matter of registering the stylesheet with the Razor engine. In _Layout.cshtml: @Styles.Render("~/CSS/file.css") The above code is similar to the one you posted in your question, except for the path that is used as a root to search the.css file. // This file is part of libigl, a simple c++ geometry processing library. // // Copyright (C) 2013 Alec Jacobson // // This Source Code Form is subject to the terms of the Mozilla Public License // v. 2.0. What's New in the FoxPro Tables To MS Access Converter Software?

FoxPro Tables To MS Access Converter Software is an application that was developed in order to allow Microsoft FoxPro users to easily transfer their tables to a Microsoft Access database environment. Inputting the required database files will not need any coding knowledge and all the functionality is based on providing database login credentials and directories. In order to be able to perform the file transfer, users need to add the containing directory which holds the DBF files. However, this task can also be achieved manually, by inputting a corresponding DBC file. This can be done using the built-in wizard, which will allow one to browse to the file location and select it. A connection test is provided and this will allow users to make sure that there is an established link between the loaded database data and the Microsoft Access database environment and that the transfer process can be carried out unhindered. The connection to the Access database is achieved by inputting the corresponding user credentials, such as the password. Provided that a successful connection has been established and that it is working after the test, once initialized, the transfer process will be accompanied by a status bar which is meant at notifying users about the progress of the transfer.
