Not only that, but he says he met President Trump's son-in-law and advisor, Jared Kushner. The trip to the Golan came shortly after President Donald Trump's announcement of the Israeli-Palestinian peace plan. Kushner's involvement in the area is also in question after he reportedly made comments last year about Israel's controlling the entire Golan. Speaking to Israel Hayom, Ya'alon disclosed that he visited the Golan, adding that he is calling on Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to go to the area. "I have been to the Golan, and I have been to the area north of the Golan. I have been to it several times in the past few months," Ya'alon said. "It is not inconceivable that Netanyahu will visit there." The defense minister says if he were prime minister, he would take advantage of the trip. He also says it would be a form of national recognition. "If I were prime minister, I would go there," Ya'alon said. "If I were prime minister, this would be a very powerful gesture, a declaration of ownership. The recognition of the Golan as part of the state of Israel." Ya'alon adds that he did not meet with Kushner, who he says he met with twice. He says that he met with the president's son-in-law for the first time in June 2017, and the second time last month. "I did not meet with Kushner about the peace plan," Ya'alon said. "The first time was in May or June 2017, and the second time was in December, shortly before the announcement of the peace plan." The longtime top military official also warned that there are 50,000 Hezbollah operatives in southern Lebanon and that the Israel Defense Forces will have to act. "The State of Israel is very strong," he said. " 3e33713323
