

Plot: During the British rule in India, the British lured several Indians to go to distant Mauritius, where they would have a better life. When they arrived there, they settled in a tree on the territory of the monastery, in which the Hindus lived.

However, after some time, an evil neighbor climbed into their territory and began to fight with them and rob their property. The Hindus did not give him, and therefore answered him the same, after which he began to provoke them. But he was caught and put on his feet, then he became terribly angry, took a knife and attacked two Indians. The villain with the knife still disappeared, but two Indians were wounded, then they decided that the Indians were the worst enemies they had ever encountered in life. Soon they were noticed lying on the ground and immediately began to inquire who they were. Then they were accused of betrayal and accused of betraying the Hindu beggars and sent to prison. Hindus are kept in terrible conditions. They are very hungry and constantly hungry. They are constantly beaten by the guards. A strict conversation is also conducted with them, which alternates with a small punishment. Every day they are fed very little food. During the day they stand on their feet, and at night they are forced to sleep on the ground, on which they are forced to lie, periodically sinking their teeth into their hands. Also in the prison, a drill review is conducted daily, which is conducted by none other than the lieutenant and his henchmen. All this time, neither their parents nor friends help the Indians. They get everything from the prison guards. After a certain time, the unfortunate prisoners will be allowed to receive help in the form of medicines or money, but after that they will have to work for another seven days, after which they will again be allowed to go out. Seven days later, a group of Indian prisoners begin to protest and demand that they be released. After that, the commander of the special forces unit arrives at the prison. After the lieutenant uses a weapon against the prisoner and, by threatening him, makes him forget about the protests, he decided to start the formation of a new composition of prisoners. Only strong and courageous people who are specially selected by one of the officers will get into this team. Seven months later, the group consisted of twelve people, and two of them were doomed to life imprisonment. A few months later, secret executions began in this prison, which the three dead prisoners did not see. They were all stabbed to death, earning them the nickname "
