Given the feel of both the IPCC and NOAA, I'm surprised that climate skeptics haven't done more to point out that there is no credible science backing up Gore's assertions about Arctic ice and Antarctic ice. Is anyone doing this? Mike > Given the feel of both the IPCC and NOAA, I'm surprised that climate skeptics haven't done more to point out that there is no credible science backing up Gore's assertions about Arctic ice and Antarctic ice. Is anyone doing this? The IPCC and NOAA are a joke and a total joke and not credible in the least. The only reason there is such response to AGW is that the media is gobbling it up as "news". On our climate outlook it states, "Since the start of the 21st century, Arctic sea ice extent has continued to decline, the Arctic has seen the largest summer ice loss since satellite observations began (ESA 2002, ESA/Polar Regions Today, 2006, Li et al., 2006), and winter sea ice cover has been in retreat since the early 1990s." We know there is no more summer sea ice, its well documented. We know that the 70 year oscillations in winter sea ice cover are ebb and flow, nothing new in that. We know that the lag in the detection of sea ice decline is due to the fact that it is not expected to be nearly as bad as they are claiming. We know that the satellite data is not reliable. We know that there is no discernible trend in the Southern Ocean sea ice patterns, which trends are not reliable. Sorry, Mike, but you are misinformed and do not know what you are talking about. Please read the IPCC report and NOAA data. They are well documented by the technical climate science community. You are also full of crap regarding the political leanings of the IPCC and NOAA. I know this because I am in that industry. What a shock. The IPCC writes in the chapter on the Arctic, "Sea level is likely to rise 0.2-0.6m by the end of the 21st century and 0.3-0.8m by mid-century from now." No, that's too much for me.

I was trying to see if there was any way to make it do that again, but to no avail. There is no option to do that. I will continue to try and fix this problem. Also while writing this, I tried every single way I could think of to try and fix this problem, including rebooting the computer with the startup disk, reinstalling the operating system and reinstalling the software. And I found the exact same problem after all of the troubleshooting. Any ideas? Another Update: I donât know if this is relevant, but what Iâm trying to do is set up the ability to do a repair install or a full reinstall from a set of discs, and I found the option to do a repair install, but I donât know how to set up the discs for that.
