“While the data is collected from our players, it is used to simulate the movement and reactions of the game’s fictional players,” said Alex White, Co-Head of EA Sports’ FIFA Development Team. “We’re excited to expand on our leading physics engine to provide a more authentic FIFA experience.” The application of HyperMotion data-driven gameplay delivers a more authentic and responsive experience on all devices. Players will be able to feel and react more naturally to the movement of the ball, while defenders will react more frequently to high-intensity duels and crosses into the penalty box, creating more dynamic moments, hard-fought games and fluid football. “The team at EA Sports has the passion and drive to continually improve the game and every year we learn more about how players react to the ball and execute complex football tactics,” said Jeremy Boyd, Executive Producer on FIFA. “They apply this data to the physics of the game to deliver a first-of-its-kind user experience for fans on the pitch and to new players.” The addition of full-body motion data, tactical gameplay, new ball shapes and high-fidelity animations and physics, which are driving the game forward, enable the team to create a first-of-its-kind mixed reality experience that will open up new gameplay possibilities. “One of the main reasons we decided to join EA Sports was to use the power of our technology to deliver more authentic gameplay,” said Zulfi Alam, Co-Founder and CEO of HumanImpact. “We believe this will create a game that players will find more fun to play and adapt to, and they will no longer be forced to make repetitive game adjustments.” The new motion capture suit the team has developed includes motion capture cameras on players’ back, hips, thighs, shins, ankles and head, as well as multiple accelerometers and gyro sensors. The data collected during these experiments will be used to create a player model for digital player simulation. Unique features and improvements in the game, including:

- New visual fidelity, including new player models, set pieces, goalkeepers and new animations
- Thicker, more-realistic ball
- Improved collision response between players, including tackling and aerial duels
- Increased animation and feeling of power in game actions

Features Key:

- FIFA 22 brings to life a new generation of players with its analysis powered controls that lead to a higher quality of decision making. What happens on the pitch? Motion data – real-time player movement and touch qualities – is used in-engine to great effect in all key on-pitch actions. For example, make sure players attack the ball first-time in dribbling, swerve a difficult tackle - or volley from 25 yards out accurately, or get the foot to the near post just as fast as you can pull the trigger.

- In Fifa 22, you have to make decisions as you acquire players, and as you develop them into effective footballers. You can see where players are at any given time, and make in-game adjustments using a new, game-changing control system.
 - The engine now ensures every tiny detail of your team's lifestyle reflects your club's identity, style and values.
 - The pre-match engine, stadium and training facility are now even more responsive and natural-feeling. You'll enjoy watching your superstar players impact your team more dynamically.
 - The intelligent Player Impact Engine takes complex movements from the pitch and uses its motion data to make sure the ball path and interactions of players stay smooth.
 - FIFA 22 also introduces a campaign that takes place in 2015 and follows the team that dominated in the 2014 World Cup: Brazil.
 - Dynamically rendered crowd and players in new stadiums create a lifelike atmosphere on and off the pitch.
 - The ability to set up your tactics and formations in any given situation dynamically has been improved, with the ability to have the classic 4-4-2 diamond or 3-5-2 on the fly. A new system allows you to build your midfield from the weakest parts of your squad to choose the right players to support the strikers.
 - FIFA 22 is officially licensed by the English Football Association. You are now able to experience the magic of The Beautiful Game like never before.
 - Expanded Scouting Reports.
 - Precise training and
