Path Figure 3-8: Using paths, you can create a vector line object that you can scale and manipulate independently of other objects in the image. Figure 3-8 shows how to create a path to trace an outline around an image to accentuate the subject matter or draw attention to some feature. In most cases, a path is most likely used to create a vector line object and represents the outline of the subject for later manipulation. Note that a path can be used to create a series of lines or lines set at various angles.

india Updated: Nov 30, 2019 15:06 IST A public holiday in Uttar Pradesh is proving a big economic hit on the government as the state is staring at a budget deficit of Rs 3.60 lakh crore in a year, according to a report by the prime minister's economic affairs secretary Ravindra Dholakia. "It is clear that a large amount of money has been lost due to public holidays. There is absolutely no point in planning, holding elections, undertaking major projects for a few days when the entire state is shut. This has to be resolved as the current state's deficit is almost equal to ₹3.60 lakh crore in a year," said Dholakia. The report was prepared and submitted to the finance minister in November. It compares the Union Budget with the previous fiscal year and also provides data on how the state's finances look at the end of October, Dholakia said. It emphasises that the spending and tax revenue increase in the union budget was less than expected. "Whatever increase was expected and planned for has actually not come," said Dholakia. The report shows that the state's overall fiscal deficit was close to the target of 3.1% of the gross state domestic product and the expenditure under various head was more than the projected but, the tax revenue dropped due to the hiked excise duty on petrol and diesel and sales tax. The amount generated in excise duty in the state in the last year has been more than ₹5,000 crore.

Murray, in a TV interview, did not come across as the nicest celebrity in the room. Murray was the first celebrity to talk about the case and has sought to distance himself from his comments. "I'm not the only one that's talking," he said. Murray also said he wanted to know why the victims were not afforded the same consideration as "someone with no money or nothing". But while Murray's comments still fly in the UK, they have never made it into the mainstream media. "I can understand why there's not been a lot of media interest in this case," Simon Fowler, a police witness, said after the hearing. "The media coverage has been very muted. I'd put that down to one of two reasons - either the family do not want to talk to the media, which they've been approached by a number of media outlets, or the family don't want to talk about the case for another reason." Mr Fowler told BBC News that the family did not want to tell their story, though he noted that their request had been made to the media. He said he was surprised by Murray's TV interview, as he did not know that anyone else was making similar comments. Arresting officers image caption Cross prosecuting after the first court hearing and arresting officers The other arresting officer is Brian Paul, who told the court that Gurney was "extremely violent". The officer said he asked Gurney to stop, but that Gurney became verbally abusive. He claimed he told Gurney it was "not a good idea to talk to me like that", before getting out of the car and arresting him. The court heard that Gurney had "swung" Paul's arms, as well as a number of other officers, and was clearly under the influence of drink and drugs at the time. The prosecution also said Gurney had been aggressive towards dogs, claiming he had bitten one animal on the leg. There were some strange aspects to the case, as well. One of the arresting officers, Sgt Walker, told the court that Gurney's car needed a new battery in it. He told the court that the battery was changed at Edinburgh Crown Court, and that the battery he had seized was in perfect condition. The prosecution claimed the car was seized at Glasgow Sheriff Court. The defence tried to persuade the judge that
