Captain Nemo's Pride of the Pen Imagine you come across a book of an unknown author with a dedication: "For Captain Nemo, with admiration. " If you turn the book over and read that line you are likely to smile. You feel the book is a genuine book, by an author who knows Nemo. This is typical of the writing of scientific biographies, and that is why this list has been put together. Each selection must live up to the challenge of the author's intention. In these brief biographies, the authors have taken the somewhat arduous task of attempting to describe the lives of real scientists who for a variety of reasons have held themselves apart from the rest of the world. In these books, there will be little detail on matters of the earth's surface. The authors will concentrate on the scientist's life, and the lives of their families. It will almost certainly be true that the scientist's basic interests are in the fields of physics, chemistry, biology or mathematics and that his interests will lead him to related fields, such as geology or astronomy. It will not be true that a scientist is necessarily outspoken in a small town or that he prefers living simply in a rural setting. The list of contributors is a mixture of mainstream science and the decidedly more esoteric. Most of the contributors will have published in high profile journals. Some will have written books for the public

The Indian government is known for his warm relationships with China and Pakistan. The recent K-series missile deal with Pakistan is their latest example. Last month, the Indian government and Pakistan struck a deal to purchase the upgraded K-313s missile system from China. While the deal is the first such deal between India and Pakistan, it is being argued that this could be the beginning of a long-term relationship as India and Pakistan continue to develop weapons for military purposes. The K-313 is China's latest generation mobile medium-to-long-range surface-to-air missile system. China supplied 50 K-313s missile systems to Pakistan in August 2007, and has also supplied the weapon systems to Pakistan over the last seven years. Pakistan has also made a deal with Russia for the S-300 missile system. The K-313 and S-300 missile systems are of the same calibre, and this is the third system that has been made available to Pakistan. India and China have a long history of relationship. India sold China weapons during the 1962 war between China and India. Since the Sino-Indian War of 1962, India has also supported China in some of its hostile activities against other countries, including the invasion of

Myanmar and the occupation of South-East Asia and China's aggression in the South China Sea. Before the 1962 war, India and China also collaborated on the transfer of nuclear technology. India and China have also held joint military exercises and visited each other regularly. India is now making arrangements to purchase Su-30 MKI jets from Russia. These are also of the same calibre as the K-313 missiles system. In the past, India has also purchased Russian anti-aircraft systems and Mikoyan-Gurevich MiG-35 fighter jets. The relationship between China and Pakistan also has a history of cooperation. Pakistan is the country with the most number of Chinese workers. There are also people who say that the Taliban are also fighting in Pakistan because of the Chinese presence there. This c9d1549cdd

In which John starts playing some D&D, and leaves the Astral Plane in order to save his raid group's bacon. "Abandoned Shrine" by Wiggy's design Abandoned Shrine is a home base of the drow, heading underground from the ruins of their temple. This home base started off as a little shop and store where the priests of the drow could go to trade their mystic powers for weapons and better clothes. Unfortunately, in building the adventurer's den, the overlords put in a locked trap, and when the heroes came to escape the traps, they fell down to the bottom of the hole. Only one fought the drop through the darkness, luckily for them his friends came to the rescue and joined in the fighting. The drow were surprised to see other drow in the citadel. They had never bargained for the party escaping so quickly, and under the rule of the matron and hulk the adventurers are now in danger of being sold on to an orc or halfling slave trader. The adventurers are stripped of their possessions, renamed 1:smiles. The adventurers head downstairs into the shop, where they meet Mizzle and Yuhk. Mizzle, a very short drow male, is a member of their small band, who is carrying the good news that the thieves were last seen heading toward the surface. Being a Drow, Yuhk doesn't do the whole 'gotta tell 'em, gotta tell 'em' thing, and he mainly just gives them jobs to do. The other members of the small band are sporting the bluebelly armor, if you look at it to closely you can figure out their drow blood. After the meeting with the thieves, the adventurers were tasked with retrieving something. Yuhk couldn't remember where they where he was supposed to go, and he advised the adventurers to listen to Mizzle. The three set off with a bag of potions. The adventurers pressed on quickly, Mizzle could only go so fast. Not far before the city the whole group got lost, heading onto a wall to make sure they found the correct path. The wall came in and around, and a short path came to a dead end. "Short way to the surface" by the dragon Mizzle led them all into a small crawlspace at the bottom of the hole. The air was wet and they were so taken back by the find that they thought this is really the tunnels
