The source of that function indicates that the script should work for local files. So the solution is to save the URL you are obtaining from the downloadUrl() function to a variable. EDIT: A "direct" URL is a URL that begins with or ftp://. The protocol you can download from is not used (or, possibly, cannot be used to download anything, and just tells the browser that it can use some other protocol). Let's take the following URL as an example: "ftp://html.mydomain.com/path/to/file.php" The function uses a "direct" URL to download that file: $.get("").{} But, as previously indicated, the url you should use to download the file is "ftp://html.mydomain.com/path/to/file.php" More on this: v in self.primary_common_args and n in v: break n
